Walkout Could Have Disastrous Effect On Nation Economy

LONDON, March 16 (P) --Britain's 200,000 shipyard workers walked out today in a strike that threatened to spread through key manufacturing industries employing up to three million men.

The crippling labor disputesthe worst in Britain since the general strike of 1926 — burst upon Prime Minister Harold Macmillan just five days before his Bermuda conference with President Eisenhower opening next Thursday.

Macmillan called in Labor Minister Iain MacLeod for a confer-ence this morning. Then he worked with Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd and Chancellor of the Exchequer Peter Thorneycroft on preparations for the Bermuda

Leaders of the 40 unions in the Confederation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions called out the shipmakers to support demands for a 10 per cent pay increase.

The CSEU at the same time or-dered a strike for next Saturday among the nation's engineering workers-key employes in manu-facturing industries such as machine tools, aircraft, automobiles, electrical equipment and heavy machinery. They also demand a 10 per cent pay increase.

If prolonged, the shipyard strike could have a disastrous effect on

His parents tried to discourage him from entering this service and they doubted that he could pass the oral and written examination, but when the day arrived he was the only person who appeared to take the examination. He had made careful and thorough preparation for the test and passed without

His first assignment was at Jersey City, which Edwards said, could be called the back door of New York City. At that time, he said, it was heavily populated by emigrants from southern and eastern Europe and he found the principal difference between the European and the Asiatic is that the former is only slightly less evasive than the latter. Modern history bears this out, he said, and he had a real problem. The stock reply of most of this shifty element when interviewed was that they could not speak English but it was interesting to see how well they could speak English when he brought along a police officer who could speak to them in their native tongue, he said.

So on the first opportunity Edwards asked to be transferred to the Middle West. Out here the criminal element hadn't learned to lie so well-that is, he said,

Begun in 1947 with the aid of a grant from the Carnegie Corporation and since then becoming a self-supporting, non-profit, corporation, the Missouri Libraries Film Cooperative serves 30 libraries over the state. Because of its non-profit basis and its very nominal yearly charge, the Cooperative is able to supply 16 mm educational films to public libraries whose budgets are far too limited to allow for the purchase of their own motion picture library.

Set up on a membership participation basis, each library that belongs has a voice in selecting the films that are purchased by the Cooperative. Distribution of these films is by regularly scheduled monthly packages to each member. Each month your Regional Library receives one package for use of Pettis County patrons and one package for use by Cooper County patrons. Loaned to groups or organizatins, these educational films which cover a wide range of subject material, have proved invaluable aids to churches, extension clubs, federated clubs, schools and Parent-Teacher groups.

Subjects expected to be covered in this preview session include new films on foreign countries, nature study, music, mental health and child-development.

This weeks bookmobile schedule: Tuesday, March 19: Dunbar, 9:00-10:00; Bunceton School, 10:10-2:00: Bunceton Downtown, 2:00-2:30: Zion Lutheran School, 2:45-3:30; Lone Elm Store, 3:30-3:45. Wednesday, March 20: Otterville School, 9:00-3:30; Otterville Downtown, 3:30-4:15.

NOT often does an official of sports, such as a referee, umpire or judge ever get spoken of in kindly phrases. So seldom does it happen that the recent article which appeared in the Boonville Daily News caught my attention and I feel it should be passed on to you Sedalia sports fans. Maybe some of the locals will realize these two Sedalia officials are far better than you have given them credit for being. The following article was written by Gene Sigman, sports editor of the Daily News:

"Several times this season in this column I have mentioned the refereeing of a pair of "striped shirted" individuals from Sedalia, Gilmore and Thompson by name. I have watched this pair of officials work several games this year, and each time I see them tooting their "little silver whistles" I get to like their "work" more

Long bristly hairs give his rotund body a shaggy appearance.

Despite the peculiarities of his looks, the nutria occupies a high spot in the world of high fashion. Plucking and shearing take away the long bristly hairs, leaving a fine, soft, lightweight fur that rates next to mink in price.

Dispatches from the fashion front forecast a decline in the popularity of mink and a steady increase in favor for nutria.

Hausam has only a half dozen pairs now, but plans to increase his "herd". Breeding stock sells for $1,500 a pair. Nutria raise four to eight kits per litter, which are ready for pelting in nine months. Going price of pelts is $30, and it takes 30 to 40 to make a full length coat that sells for around $5,000 according to Hausam.

Mrs. Hausam is looking forward to the day when she can have a coat made from their own nutria, "although I'll settle for a stole and work up to a coat," she said.

The two older Hausam boys, Jim, 14 and Don, 12, have taken on much of the care of the nutria.

FROM KELLOGG'S OF BATTLE CREEK

A UUUU TUUU YYAI IU DREAK THE LAXATIVE DRUG HABIT

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN AND MILK-NATURE'S GREAT FOOD COMBINATION

For relief from irregularity due to insufficient bulk

Delicious, appetizing—solid nutritional benefits

Doesn't this make sense to you? If you suffer from constipation due to lack of dietary bulk, the way to go about correcting this problem is to restore natural food bulk to your

This is the simple, everyday reason why Kellogg's All-Bran has given such effective relief to millions

A formula for fitness and regularity—One ounce (half a cup) of Kellogg's All-Bran with milk every morning gives you the natural food bulk you need daily plus 5 vitamins, 3 minerals and high-quality protein. of people. All-Bran gets at the cause in a perfectly natural way.

And yet there are many folks who persist in the belief that nothing can combat "their constipation" but laxative drugs or chemical preparations. Despite the fact that these same unhappy people have frequently struggled with irregularity

If this sounds like you, wouldn't you be wiser to put your faith in nature and try All-Bran? This is the original ready-to-eat bran cere-al with all the benefits of bran left in. Just a morning serving provides all the bulk you need daily.

Tastes good—good for you

Actually, All-Bran has an old-fashioned bran muffin flavor that lots of people prefer over any other cereal. And a single bowl with milk gives you essential nutritional values including vitamins, minerals and high-quality protein.

Since W. K. Kellogg originated All-Bran more than 40 years ago, it has become the most widely accepted and used of all bran cereals. We recommend that you eat half a cup of All-Bran with milk, every day for 10 days. Put yourself back on the track this safe, pleasant, inexpensive way.

Double-your-money-back

All-Bran must satisfy you on all counts or you may return the empty carton and get twice what you paid. That is a promise from Kellogg's of Battle Creek, Michigan.

Miss Judith Blackburn Becomes Bride Of Richard E. Andrews

Miss Judith Gail Blackburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Blackburn, became the bride of Richard Ellis Andrews, son of Mrs. Ellis Andrews, Kansas City, at four o'clock Saturday afternoon, March 9, at Houstonia Community Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Floyd Frye before a setting of rose colored gladioli, white pompoms and two candelabra holding lighted white tapers.

Mrs. Walter Fricke, organist, played a medley of traditional wedding music preceding the ceremony and accompanied Miss Bonnie Bissenherz of Concordia, as she sang "True Love," "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a ballerina length gown of all over French imported Chantilly lace. It costs so little to be well-groomed when actually TIME is the most important factor. We are going into two seasons now, spring then summer where being well groomed and having an extra feminine look is more important than ever. Make the most of your natural assets. Perhaps your hair natural assets. Perhaps your hair needs re-styling—you know your hair is very important and should always be kept shining clean. Perhaps a new lighter make-up would be better for spring before you indulge in getting a suntan. Does your figure need a slimming down before you have your new suit fitted? A strict diet for a few weeks and proper exercise can frequently and proper exercise can frequently be just what your figure needs. Slim hips are very important in wearing the longer waistlines and sheath-type dresses, so better start now. You can buy the most expensive wardrobe available and if you haven't kept yourself groomed in top-notch manner you may as well wear your oldest clothes. Don't put off another day doing for your-self what you admire in others.

"NEVER UNDERESTIMATE . . ."-The National Assn. of Manufacturers is a pretty hardheaded bunch of hombres, so when they underline the increasingly important role of women in the nation's economy it's time for interested males to sit up and pay attention. Newschart above illustrates some of the facts about U.S. women recently stressed by the NAM. On the basis of those facts and others—such as the expectation that the female labor force will number 32 million by 1975, the NAM plans to greatly expand its activities in the women's field.

This is the picture that the young housewife who doesn't give two pins about her appearance presents to some of the people in her life. On rising in the morning, she greets the milkman (left) with the man, nothing was too much trouble. We see her (right) as curlers still in, wearing a robe that should have been discarded long ago. At breakfast, her husband hides behind his newspaper out, with powder and lipstick quickly applied.

Learning Good Citizenship

This weekend an unusual experience was provided 550 Explorer Scouts from the Kansas City area Boy Scout Council.

At neighboring Whiteman Air Force Base these scouts spent two nights out under tents and a full moon across the street from the bomb squadrons. During the day conferences in base buildings were held for the purpose of bringing each Explorer a better understanding of his privileges and responsibilities as a citizen in his home and community. There were church services this morning, too.

Whiteman is an appropriate place for citizenship training. Youth and men alike have found it so during war and peacetime. Training for defense of their country at the risk of life and limb is a big part of the air base operation, but few men leave there who have not assimilated in the training program more than a knowledge of how to keep bombers flying. Citizenship and religious training goes on at Whiteman every day. Those who don't absorb it lose more than they will ever realize.

To hear that Whiteman base is host to 550 Explorer Scouts for a program of building better citizenship is to chalk up another in a series of incidents which brings this air base operation closer to the people of Missouri.

On many occasions men, women and children of Missouri have been welcomed to the base to learn what the Air Force is building and doing. No one leaves without a better understanding of the magnitude of the air power defense job and the part of preparedness which Whiteman contributes to the national program.

In the history of Whiteman Air Force Base, public relations with surrounding communities never have been on a higher level than now. This attitude does not come easy around military installations. There are always negative elements at work on both sides which set

Truman 'Tells Off' An Investigator

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON - The Eisenhower administration has been investigating Harry Truman's brother, Vivian, and it has made the ex-president of the United States see red. He cussed out the investigator to his face in language so purple it can't be printed here. The mildest name Mr. Truman called the agent from Washington was "anthead."

Behind the investigation was an old Missouri feud waged by ex-congressman Jeff Hillelson of Kansas City against the ex-president, the expresident's kin, and anyone associated with the name of Truman.

Hillelson is a Republican who was elected to Congress in the 1952 GOP landslide on the plea that he was a poor but honest grocery clerk, though actually he was married to the Goetz brewing fortune. After serving an unspectacular one term in Congress during which he distinguished himself chiefly by taking a junket to westsince then has been looking for a federal job. Particularly he has had his eye on the job held by June Holloway, lifelong friend of Truman, as Kansas City manager of the General Services administration.

Hillelson has now won his battle and Holloway is being transferred to Seattle. However, it took him a long time, plus an investigation of Truman's brother to win.

Harry Truman Explodes

Throughout his congressional term, Hillelson kept up a steady bombardment against Holloway. As fast as one charge was investigated and disproved, Hillelson would fire another. After several investigations had failed, he called on then-GSA Administrator Ed Mansure and insisted: "There must be some skulduggery in that region.'

To placate him, Mansure let Hillelson search the government files himself for political dirt. The congressman picked out 30 cases that looked suspicious to him, including one that involved Vivian Truman in alleged influence peddling.

Each case was thoroughly investigated by the Eisenhower administration, which sent a special investigator to Kansas City to run down every possible lead. After the investigator questioned Vivian Truman, Harry hit the roof.

He summoned the agent to his Kansas City office. Out of respect for the ex-president, the man showed up and was greeted at the door with a verbal blast in the fiery Truman tradition. The expletives flew so fast that the investigator could only stutter.

In the end, the allegations proved to be false. Both June Holloway and Vivian Truman were completely cleared. Holloway was kept on the job, and Hillelson was defeated for re-election. Mansure suspected that Hillelson had anticipated his defeat and that all he really wanted SPOKESMAN - REVIEW (Spokane, Wash.): Compulsory Fluoridation. - The long arm of federal government control over the individual lives of some of its citizens has now been stretched even farther than in the past. The department of defense has directed its officials on state-side military bases on which dependent children live to fluoridate the domestic water supply used by resident families.

The fluoridation of water to protect children's teeth from decay has become a controversial matter in many local communities where it has been proposed. Its advocates include various professional dental societies and individuals sincerely concerned with public health. Opponents include other persons who, for one reason or another, do not want their water "doctored" before it reaches their homes. The question has been settled by vote in some localities . . .

Military personnel and their families are always subjected to all sorts of rules and regulations, and many will take the fluoridation order in stride. The national defense department directive, however, does appear to take a rather basic freedom of choice away from the individual citizen who happens to be quartered on a mili-

Regardless of the merits or demerits of fluoridation, there seems to be little reason why it should be imposed upon the children of an airman in the name of national defense, without the consent of the majority of families scheduled to be treated.

Are You Afraid To Take On Net Income Direct Action Toward Child

By Mrs. Muriel Lawrence At four, Andy balks at coming to meals, delaying his mother's work. So at mealtimes she tries to bribe him to be "nice" to her by being "nice" to him. She'll pretend great interest in the building of blocks he's erecting, saying, "My, what a big house you're making! Is it going to have a garage? Come along to lunch and tell me about

But Andy always senses his mother's fear of him behind these words of simulated interest. It upsets him. He doesn't like being the dependent of a protector who suffers from fear of him.

So he says angrily, "Go away, you old dopey brat." But this open appeal for unfrightened action from his mother gets him nowhere. Instead of picking him up and bearing him out to the kitchen, she just experiences more resentment at him for increasing her helpless-

She goes on talking. She says, "Is that the way to speak to your Mommy? Don't you know I love you and want you to be a good boy? Come to lunch now . . . "

In a recent issue of the Ladies Home Journal, Dr. Erich Fromm names the problem of Andy's mother. He says, "People who talk and alize that there are certain acts to which one must commit oneself if one is really going to learn anything. The person who wants to swim, for instance, can talk with a swimming teacher all he wants to - but he can never learn to swim until he commits himself to trust the carrying power of the water.

Many parents fear taking direct action toward children

Psychological knowledge can't help us with this fear. We can read child psychology books until our brains are jammed with information on how to act toward Andyand still remain incapable of committing ourselves to the carrying power of action toward him.

This is the weakness of parent tell us what to do, they cannot swing us over the chasm that lies between doing and fear of doing. They can't endow Andy's mother with the self-trust she needs to leap into the unknown consequence of acting toward him, feeling, "This thing I do seems so right to me that I can't be bothered fussing about its consequences.'

Often, parents who fear action toward children were victims of childhood overprotection. They dare not give themselves to any risky action because they were denied talk and talk very often do not re- discovering how often it blesses us.

St. Patrick's Day

Oh, it's very special — is St. Patrick's Day

When we try to honor the Irish some way,

Be we German or French, be we Spanish or Jew

We all don a bit of the St. Patrick's hue;

For every place on March seventeen

Whoever we are — we put on some green,
We wear bright green ties or sweaters or shirts

The women step out in green blouses or skirts,
And if we have nothing green we can wear

And if we have nothing green we can wear

We pin on a shamrock, put a bow in our hair;
But always we find a way to display

Our tribute to Patrick upon his great day,
We sing Irish songs and we love every one,

Give St. Patrick's parties which are so much fun,
Tell the St. Patrick's story o'er and o'er

As if we have never heard it before,
We tell Irish jokes of Old Pat and Mike

They go and on with not two alike;
We all like the Irish, we have to admit,

These folks so blessed with humor and wit.

Yes, St. Patrick's Day is quite an event,

Not only for those of Irish decent

But all who love color and everything gay,

So—Top e' the Mornin' this St. Patrick's Day.

Polish Communists Want $300 Million From U.S.

By JOSEPH A. DEAR Of Our Washington Bureau WASHINGTON-A contingent of Polish Communists is here to put the bite on President Eisenhower. They want $300 million.

That's $100 million more than King Saud wanted. It's $100 million larger than the special Mideast fund. Congressional opposition to the Polish request is apparent. Senator William Knowland (Calif.), the Republican leader at the Capitol, has stated the case for the opposition. It would be nonsensical, he says, for us to help Russia by saving the economy of her satellites with an East Europe Marshall Plan. In Knowland's view, no country is worthy of aid unless it is willing to stand with us and be counted as our ally.

The administration thus is confronted with a perplexing problem. Publicly, at least, it still is wedded to the policy of peaceful liberation. Weaning camp following satellites from Russia and encouraging them to face toward the West and freedom is part and parcel of the policy. The Polish delegation offers an opportunity of practicing that policy. To do so, however, might provoke a minor revolt on Capitol Hill.

The Gomulka regime, which came to power in Poland last fall, enjoys considerable independence. Moscow undoubtedly would prefer a more tractable regime. To get that, though, decisive intervention by the Red Army would be necessary. Russia obviously is willing to make some concessions to avoid

But Russia will not be willing to concede all. Poland, under Gomulka, is a Communist state. It is bound to Russia by the Warsaw Pact. It could not stand to be counted with the free nations without inviting annihilation. But if Senator Knowland's foreign aid eligibility test is demonstrably illogical, his primary criticism of administration policy may have merit. Is it in the national interest to shore up the economies of either the satellites or of Communist states that have achieved a degree of independence from Moscow?

The Administration holds to the theory that it is. Tito of Yugoslavia usually is cited as proof of the theory. The argument: It was patently to our interest to help Tito, because his break with Moscow caused serious difficulties for Russia in Eastern Europe. In short, helping him hurt international Communism.

That is not Tito's viewpoint at all. In his opinion, our aid must have appeared helpful to the Communist cause. This is why: The late Stalin insisted on tight personal control of the ideology and physical apparatus of Communism everywhere. There was only one right way, the Stalin way. Tito disagreed. (So, incidentally, did Gomulka. He argued that Poland's path to socialism should not duplicate that which Russia followed. Tito's defection put Gomulka out of business until the upheavel last year.) Tito's specific thesis was that Stalin's intransigence retarded the advance of international Com-

In effect, the Titoists have been arguing for a sort of commonwealth concept. The British have loosened their grasp on many peoples, with the thought that these are strengthening practices. Similarly, the Titoists believe a relaxation of control by Moscow, more flexibility on the part of the Kremlin leadership, will strengthen international Communism. The entire movement would get a shot in the arm if national Communism were recognized. So long as Stalin was alive, the Titoists could not hope for compromise. And at that time, there was much to be said for extending aid to Tito. But Stalin is dead, and his successors have demonstrated the flexibility of their approach. The ties to Moscow are looser. Moscow, however, seems willing to collaborate with Belgrade and vice versa. It was never clear that Tito would side with the West in event of war. As of now it appears unlikely that he would, even though he still has his differences with Moscow.

There is more to the picture, course. And, on the balance it is encouraging. Moscow assumes great risks in downgrading the importance of doctrine. Ideology has been a binding fabric, just as important to Communism as it is to the church. The Kremlin had to make some adjustments, because the success of the Chinese Communists flew in the face of doctrine. (The Chicom drive for power was based on peasant massee not urban masses as doctrine prescribed.) But when doctrinal control is relaxed, there is a possibility that the process will continue to the point where no doctrine or system is left.

Democrat Pick-ups

Odds and Ends By News Staff

THE WOMAN HAD packed her little overnight case with things she would need and could get to easily on her trip from California to Sedalia. Just as she was ready to leave, a friend gave her a tube of hand cream which she had found very useful on the trip. As she was riding along on the train she decided she needed some hand cream, so she reached down into her bag, got the tube out, and put on a generous amount. It felt funny, and gritty, and it didn't seem to rub in very well-so she picked up the tube and looked at it. The tube was the same color as her hand cream tube, but the printing was different. It read: "Toothpaste."-H. L.

THE PRIEST, dressed for the street, applied for a driver's license and the young girl, who was about to marry a Catholic boy and was soon to take instructions to become a member of the church, looked up at the man and began asking the questions listed on the application. She did all right until she turned the page and there at the top of the page was the question "Occupation?"

The girl, not realizing he was a priest and that he should have been recognized as such, asked: "Occupation?"

The priest never faltered. His answer came quickly and seriously: "Taxi driver."

Of course, somebody saved the day for her who overheard what was said and the girl was embarrassed that she hadn't known, but she was still more embarrassed when a few days later she went with her boy friend to start taking instructions in the Catholic faith and was introduced to the same priest. The worst part was that he remembered her and commented with a grin, "I think I've met you some place before."-H.L.

The Do-It-Yourself jobs might be alright - but read the directions first, and then do a little thinking on the subject.

The young man was putting down a tile floor and the job of smearing the rubber glue on the back of each tile was messy. He was hurrying to get each tile covered and in place and though his hands were getting pretty well covered with the stuff, too, he wasn't taking any time to get it off. He reached for the trowel put on some more of the sticky stuff and laid the tile - then he tried to let loose of the trowel, and couldn't. His hand was closed tightly around the trowel handle and it just wouldn't come loose. He couldn't even move his fingers and there he was wondering if he was going to have to go around the rest of his life with a trowel in his hand

He tried coal oil - it work. He tried gasoline. It didn't work either. He tried kitchen cleanser and it helped just a little. He soaked his hand in salt water. It made it worse. He kept trying one thing after another and it got a little better. He didn't know exactly what was responsible, per-haps a combination of all the things he had used. But it did seem a little softer. One by one he pried his finger off the trowel handle and it was real work. But he still wasn't rid of that trowel. The handle of it was firmly glued to the palm of his hand.

He pulled, he tugged, he tried to dig under. He used a stiff scrub brush and finally, by degrees he got the trowel handle loose - as well as the skin on his hand.. Well. that job was done - now to get the rest of the stuff off his hand. He used the scrub brush some more. He rubbed his palm until the gum-like stuff rolled off in little bits. His fingers were still in a cupped position and stuck together. His hand was sore because part of the skin was off, and he was in a bad frame of mind. It wasn't like he might have worked at the shops, in a garage or some place where it didn't matter so much if his hands did have black stuff all over them. He had a white collar job and he couldn't get all of that black stuff off. His fingernails were black-edged and the thoughts in his mind were just the same color.

It took several days to get those hands to look and feel normal

It was not until he was free of the trowel that he read the directions which said if you got any of the stuff on your hands to wipe it off. But he doesn't think the directions at that were strong enough, They should be as strong as the glue and read: "Warning." in big black letters. "If you get any glue on your hands wipe it off immedately" and the "immediately" should be in big black letters, too. He still has some tile to lay-but he is going to use the glue with care. And he may even have to get a new trowel. He can't get the stuff off the wooden handle.

fabric surprises. Newest of these, for spring, is a nylon chiffon that's being used for the younger set as well as for adult fashions. Chiffon has long been a favorite of many women - both young and mature - for evening. This pring, however, it turns up in suit ouses and even in cardigans.

And despite its filmy appearance, the new nylon chiffon is a practical one for sub-teens and teen-agers. Looking fragile, it is actualwashable, holds pleats well, re-lists wrinkling and mussing, and packs beautifully.

There's something for everybody in the styling given this nylon chiffon: prints on dark grounds florals, tweedy effects, stripes and polka dots. Colors travel from the pale pastels through the hot shades and into the blacks, browns and navys. And this spring, there's a whole range of mauvy-blues and aqua-greens. Nylon is also used in combination with silk to make a misty, hand - washable fabric of great

As one of the producers of Wide Wide World (NBC-TV), Neuman will attempt to bring that "freedom of expression" to the home screen - next Sunday afternoon in a program called "Flight." It will be quite a production, one of the most complex ever attempted, with about 3,500 people involved in numerous remote live television pickups of man in flight.

The program will attempt a remote pickup of a man parachuting from a plane with a camera strapped to him. If all goes well, we'll hear his comments and see the ground rushing up through the camera lens as he falls.

Another "television first" will be attempted on the program when a B52 is shown refueling in the air. The F104 and F102, the nation's newest fighter planes, also will be shown in flight for the first time on the home screen. Why do people glide? This is one of the questions "Flight" will try to answer.

Saturday evening the Academy will present its annual Emmy Awards for exceptional contributions to television.

Here is the way the winners were selected: The Academy was decided by a vote of 2,500 academy members.
